Baruti Kafele describes your role as an assistant principal as “one of the most misunderstood and underutilized positions in education... You are an instructional leader, however, you are not the leader of the school. Therefore, you must carefully navigate to ensure that you thrive in your role...”

The role of AP has always been one of the most challenging, but never more so than now. And even if you've been at it for a while, nothing could have prepared you for the leadership role you would be called upon to do during a global pandemic. The most critical thing for school leaders like you to be doing right now is connecting with your colleagues. No one has all of the answers, but together you have ideas to share, skill sets to learn, and support to offer one another.
